Domain: Automotive Surveillance

Problem Statement: Computer vision can be used to automate supervision and generate action appropriate action trigger if the event is predicted from the image of interest. For example a car moving on the road can be easily identified by a camera as make of the car, type, colour, number plates etc.

Objective: The object of this project is to design a deep learning based model for car detection.

Approach - Step 1: Import the data - Step 2: Map training and testing images to its classes. - Step 3: Map training and testing images to its annotations. - Step 4: Perform Exploratory Data analysis - Step 4: Load images and preprocess

- Step 5: Design, train and test CNN models to classify the car and find the bounding boxes. This will also involve creating a pipeline involving data augmentation (like flip, rotate etc), normalizing the image. This would all be done online as dataset is large and will not fit in the memory. - Step 6: Design, train and test RCNN & its hybrids based object detection models to impose the bounding box or mask over the area of interest - Step 7: Pickle the best model and use it for further prediction - Step 8: Design a clickable UI that can automate the tasks of importing the data, mapping the train/test images to its classes, train and build a model and use the pickled model to predict based on an image input by the user

Data Description: The Cars dataset contains 16,185 images of 196 classes of cars. The data is split into 8,144 training images and 8,041 testing images, where each class has been split roughly in a 50-50 split. Classes are typically at the level of Make, Model, Year, e.g. Tesla Model S 2012 or BMW M3 coupe 2012. Data description: Train Images: Consists of real images of cars as per the make and year of the car. Test Images: Consists of real images of cars as per the make and year of the car. Train Annotation: Consists of bounding box region for training images. Test Annotation: Consists of bounding box region for testing images.

Evaluation: For evaluating the performance of the models, one or more measures as relevant will be captured. For classification:

- Categorical Accuracy: Since the class labels will be one-hot encoded, Categorical accuracy will be calculated to measure how often predictions matches one-hot labels.

For the predictions involving bounding boxes:

- Intersection over union (IoU)- a measure of overlap between the ground truth and predicted bounding boxes. A threshold value of IOU above 0.5 would be set. If the IOU is above the threshold the prediction is considered good.

- Precision and recall- While precision indicates what percentage of positive predictions are correct , Recall would indicate what percentage of ground truth objects were found. True positives are calculated based on Number_of_detection with $\text{IoU} > \text{threshold}$. False positives are number of detections with $\text{IoU} \leq \text{threshold}$ or detected more than once. False Negative = number of objects that not detected or detected with $\text{IoU} \leq \text{threshold}$. Precision = True positive / (True positive + False positive); Recall = True positive / (True positive + False negative)
- Average Precision: AP will be computed only for an object class on all images as $\text{AVG}(\text{Precision for each of 11 Recalls } \{\text{precision} = 0, 0.1, \dots, 1\})$
- Mean average precision (mAP): Mean of the average Precision computed for all the classes on all the images.

2 Basic Configuration Information

Conventions followed:

- project_path : identifies the path to the main project folder
- data_path: Path where data stored with subfolders as defined below
- train_path: path where train data stored
- test_path: path where test data stored

3 The project folder structure

Under the project path save the data files as per the project structure

Main Project folder (identified by project_path)

project_path data anno_train.csv anno_test.csv names.csv car_data car_data

4.1 Input to the requirements.txt file

Basic packages- identify the versions and add

- python=3.*
- numpy=1.19
- sklearn=0.24
- streamlit=0.77
- pandas==1.2.1
- tensorflow=2.4
- albumentations=0.5.2

5 Load the train and test data and map the data to its classes

- Step 1: Import the data from anno_train.csv, anno_test.csv files
- Step 2: Map training and testing images to its classes.
- Step 3: Map training and testing images to its annotations.
- Step 4: Display images with bounding box.
- Step 5: Import the data from names.csv file
- Step 6: Perform exploratory Data analysis

In steps 2/3, we will also perform sanitization checks on the data like bounding boxes are smaller than the image size, folder names are same as that provided in the annotation file, also labels provided are matching as that of folder name.

Since the train and test annotation .csv files does not have the headers, while loading the data specifying the headings as identified in the stanford car data set. The fields are respectively Image-FileName: Name of the file containing the image of the car x1: Min x-value of the bounding box, in pixels x2: Max x-value of the bounding box, in pixels y1: Min y-value of the bounding box, in pixels y2: Max y-value of the bounding box, in pixels label_index: Value of the class label

Bounding boxes given in the dataset are of pascal format, we will convert to coco format.

Since the names.csv file contains only the class name and does not have a header, header labels to be specified while loading the data and a label indexing matching with the class to be included.

6 Exploratory Data Analysis¶

As part of exploratory analysis will do : -a sanity check and ensure all the data has been imported correctly and the columns labelled appropriately -identify null values and duplicate values if any -identify the data types and if any further conversion is required -Identify the distribution of classes, whether any of the classes are over represented/under represented indicating imbalance in the class distribution that would affect the performance. - Identify if data split equally among the train and test sets EDA can provide useful insights of the data and identify what further processing is required that can help build a robust model.

As can be observed from the data , there is a slight imbalance in the distribution of data across the classes with label 119 being most represented with 68 samples in train data while the least represented was 136(24 samples). However among the two data sets there seems to be some correspondence between the distribution across the classes indicating that there is almost a 50-50 data split across the train and test data specified.

6.0.1 Sample images, check dimensions and display images with the bounding boxes¶

[27]: #Plot a sample image from train data set from PIL import Image sample_image = Image.open(train_path+'Acura Integra Type R 2001/03968.jpg') imgplot = plt.imshow(sample_image) plt.show()
#convert the image to an np array and check the image dimensions
dims = np.shape(sample_image) print("Dimensions of the sample image from train data set") print('height:', dims[0], 'width:', dims[1], 'channels:', dims[2])

Dimensions of the sample image from train data set height: 1536 width: 2048 channels: 3

[28]: # For image specific classification and transformation, would need to ↳ collapse spatial dimensions so that we have a matrix of pixels by color ↳ channels.
#checking the matrix dimensions
pixel_matrix = np.reshape(sample_image, (dims[0] * dims[1], dims[2]))
print(np.shape(pixel_matrix))

(3145728, 3)

[29]: #convert the image to an array and check the image dimensions sample_train2 = plt.imread(train_path+'Chevrolet Traverse SUV 2012/00998.jpg')

dims = np.shape(sample_train2) print("Sample train image size:", dims) pixel_matrix = np.reshape(sample_train2, (dims[0] * dims[1], dims[2]))
print(np.shape(pixel_matrix))

Sample train image size: (480, 640, 3) (307200, 3)

[30]: #check for image dimensions in test images

sample_test1 = plt.imread(test_path+'/Acura TSX Sedan 2012/03090.jpg') dims = np.shape(sample_test1) print("Sample test image size:", dims) pixel_matrix = np.reshape(sample_test1, (dims[0] * dims[1], dims[2]))
print(np.shape(pixel_matrix))

Sample test image size: (292, 467, 3) (136364, 3)

As observed there is difference in dimensions across the images and hence they need to be resized to a common scale for further processing as required if pre-trained convolutional models are used initially for feature extraction

Checking the samples of cars from similar make ,model and year

[31]: #custom function to plot some samples of a particular make of car

import matplotlib.pyplot as plt import os

def plot_images(path):

    for i in range(5):
        for j in range(4):
            axarr[i,j].imshow(images_list.pop())

[32]: #Let us check the images of cars in the train data set that have the similar

[33]: #Let us check the images of a particular make model year of car in test data set

Images of the cars in both data sets are in different alignments, views and illumination levels. The color of the images and the back ground colors are also varying.

6.0.2 Calculate the mean/std of the train dataset

This function is calculating the mean and std of the complete train dataset. As we cannot load the complete dataset in one go so each image is loaded and the sum across each channel is calculated, finally mean is obtained across each channel. Further this mean is used to calculate the std. Call of this function is heavy, so we calculated the mean/std once and resued it further.

6.1 Loading the images and creating the metadata

Steps:

- Populate the data-structure DatasetMetaData which will have all information contained in place like image-path, label, encoded label, bounding-box. Final output will be array for of such objects for each image.
- During population it reads the all annotation files and gather information on labels, bounding box etc
- It will also perform the sanitization checks on the dataset like size of bounding box should be less the image size, labels provided are matching those of the folder names, folder names are matching those in the annotation files.
- Bounding box provided are in pascal format, we are converting this in coco format.

All Tasks for Milestone 1 Done.

As we see from above there is a slight mistake in the directory name in the dataset vs file present in the annotation name. Although we have label indexes associated to each image name so this will not going to make as such any difference. Dataset seems to be clean and passing all sanity checks

The accuracy of classification is currently low and needs further improvement. Will skip this model and try other models that can give better performance.

8.0.1 SSD-Mobile Net V2 for Object Detection

Earlier trial proved MobileNetV2 was able to classify on the data set and with further fine tuning performance could be improved. However since MobileNetV2 alone was not able to give good performance when it comes to localisation, attempted Single Shot Detector (SSD) with Mobilenet as feature extractor. SSD needs one single shot to detect objects within the image compared to other regional proposal network based approaches like R-CNN(2 stages one for generating region proposal, one for detecting object for each proposal). Hence this single stage approach should be faster compared to two stage methods. Instead of handcrafting a model from scratch, we used a pretrained model. For training the SSD model with Mobile Net V2 as backbone we used the TensorFlow Object Detection API available in the Tensorflow 2 Model zoo. The detection model pretrained on COCO 2017 data set was used for initializing.

Prerequisite : -Tensorflow Version 2.2 or above. Approach: -Download the Tensorflow models from Tensorflow Model Zoo -Download the necessary libraries - Load images and annotations - Create Tensor flow records - Create label map file - Configure training /evaluation pipeline - Identify evaluation metrics :coco - Train and evaluate the model (subset of data and full data) Since Tensorflow Object Detection API uses Protobufs to configure model and training parameters, the Protobuf libraries must be downloaded and compiled before using Tensorflow object detection framework. Install pycotools package To use COCO object detection metrics add metrics_set: "coco_detection_metrics" to the eval_config message in the config file.

tf.py_func is deprecated in TF V2. Instead, there are two options available in V2.

- tf.py_function takes a python function which manipulates tf eager tensors instead of numpy arrays. It's easy to convert a tf eager tensor to an ndarray (just call tensor.numpy()) but having access to eager tensors means `tf.py_function`'s can use accelerators such as GPUs as well as being differentiable using a gradient tape.
- tf.numpy_function maintains the semantics of the deprecated tf.py_func (it is not differentiable, and manipulates numpy arrays). It drops the stateful argument making all functions stateful.

tf.py_func is deprecated in TF V2. Instead, there are two options available in V2.
- tf.py_function takes a python function which manipulates tf eager tensors instead of numpy arrays. It's easy to convert a tf eager tensor to an ndarray (just call tensor.numpy()) but having access to eager tensors means `tf.py_function`'s can use accelerators such as GPUs as well as being differentiable using a gradient tape.
- tf.numpy_function maintains the semantics of the deprecated tf.py_func (it is not differentiable, and manipulates numpy arrays). It drops the stateful argument making all functions stateful.

Loading model...Done! Took 18.555947303771973 seconds

Summary: For training the SSD model with Mobile Net V2 as backbone we used the Tensor-Flow Object Detection API available in the Tensorflow 2 Model zoo. with pretrained weights from COCO 2017 data set for initializing. To begin with we started with a subset of data and then with the full data set. Experimented with the various parameters and improved the performance.Parameters changed included but not limited to the following: - Number of classes model.ssd.num_classes(to 196 based on the classes in the data) - Batch size reduced from 256 to 24 - Initializer - Box_predictor:initializer=random_normal_initializer - Classification loss changed from Sigmoid to sigmoid focal with changes in gamma and alpha parameters . - Optimizer changed from rms prop to adam optimizer - Loss weightages for Classification loss and localisation losses adjusted.

For the subset of data mean average precision values @IOU 0.5 were greater than 0.3 on an average,however on full data set it didnot yield good results. Though we were able to get improved performance in terms of reduced loss, the classification was not appropriate and the bounding boxes were not getting plotted correctly.On a smaller data though mean Average Precision values were Hence decided not to pursue with this Tensorflow object detection API.

9 Yolo V3(anchorless) Based Model

We will now train the model using Yolo V3 architecure and tranfer learning with Yolo V3 weights . We will also first try to find the right learning rate using the lr-finder and then use learning rate in for fine-tuning pre-trained network

[174]: <tensorflow.python.keras.callbacks.History at 0x7f0160156dd0>

We will use the above found learning rate range and further fine-tune the pre-trained network

As you see from above, loss starts increasing drastically after 0.1 learning rate, so this is our max_lr, and minimum can be chosen 10 times smaller. So we can pick 0.01 as our starting learning rate for the fine tuning of the network

[175]: ## This code has been taken from public repository:

from tensorflow.keras.callbacks import *
from tensorflow.keras import backend as K
import numpy as np

class CyclicLR(Callback):
    """This callback implements a cyclical learning rate policy (CLR).
    The method cycles the learning rate between two boundaries with some constant frequency, as detailed in this paper (https://arxiv.org/abs/↪1506.01186).
    The amplitude of the cycle can be scaled on a per-iteration or
    per-cycle basis.
    This class has three built-in policies, as put forth in the paper.
    "triangular":
        A basic triangular cycle w/ no amplitude scaling.
    "triangular2":
        A basic triangular cycle that scales initial amplitude by half each ↪cycle.
    "exp_range":
        A cycle that scales initial amplitude by gamma(cycle iterations) at ↪each cycle iteration.
    For more detail, please see paper.

Example

```python
clr = CyclicLR(base_lr=0.001, max_lr=0.006, step_size=2000., mode='triangular') model.fit(X_train, Y_train, callbacks=[clr])

Class also supports custom scaling functions:

```python
clr_fn = lambda x: 0.5*(1+np.sin(x*np.pi/2.))
clr = CyclicLR(base_lr=0.001, max_lr=0.006,
 step_size=2000., scale_fn=clr_fn,
 scale_mode='cycle')

Arguments

`base_lr`: initial learning rate which is the lower boundary in the cycle.

`max_lr`: upper boundary in the cycle. Functionally, it defines the cycle amplitude ($\text{max_lr} - \text{base_lr}$). The lr at any cycle is the sum of `base_lr` and some scaling of the amplitude; therefore `max_lr` may not actually be reached depending on scaling function.

step_size: number of training iterations per half cycle. Authors suggest setting step_size
2-8 x training iterations in epoch.
mode: one of {triangular, triangular2, exp_range}.
Default 'triangular'.
Values correspond to policies detailed above.
If scale_fn is not None, this argument is ignored.
gamma: constant in 'exp_range' scaling function:
gamma(cycle iterations)
scale_fn: Custom scaling policy defined by a single argument lambda function, where 0 <= scale_fn(x) <= 1 for all x >= 0.
mode parameter is ignored
scale_mode: {'cycle', 'iterations'}.
Defines whether scale_fn is evaluated on cycle number or cycle iterations (training iterations since start of cycle). Default is 'cycle'.

10 EfficientNetB5 Based Model

We will now try using efficientnetb5. We will also first try to find the right learning rate using the lr-finder and then use learning rate in for fine-tuning pre-trained network

10.0.1 Finding the right Learning Rate

This section implements the learning rate finder utility and will be used to determine the right learning rate. This is based on Leslie Smith's paper <https://arxiv.org/abs/1506.01186>.

The automatic learning rate finder algorithm works like this:

- Step #1: We start by defining an upper and lower bound on our learning rate. The lower bound should be very small (1e-10) and the upper bound should be very large (1e+1). At 1e-10 the learning rate will be too small for our network to learn, while at 1e+1 the learning rate will be too large and our model will overfit. Both of these are okay, and in fact, that's what we hope to see!
- Step #2: We then start training our network, starting at the lower bound. After each batch update, we exponentially increase our learning rate. We log the loss after each batch update as well.
- Step #3: Training continues, and therefore the learning rate continues to increase until we hit our maximum learning rate value. Typically, this entire training process/learning rate increase only takes 1-5 epochs.
- Step #4: After training is complete we plot a smoothed loss over time, enabling us to see when the learning rate is both: Just large enough for loss to decrease. And too large, to the point where loss starts to increase.

As you see from above, loss starts increasing drastically after 0.1 learning rate, so this is our max_lr, and minimum can be chosen 10 times smaller. So we can pick 0.01 as our starting learning rate for the fine tuning of the network

We will use the above found learning rate range and further fine-tune the pre-trained network

If you look at above visualizations, labels were correct, but there is some issue with the bounding boxes. It seems that starting coordinate is always turning to be zero and hence these predicted bounding boxes seems to be shifted to left side. This is clearly an issue. Further investigation was done to understand what can possibly be the issue with EfficientNetB5

10.1 Further Experimentation on EfficientNetB5

Issue was with the layer GlobalMaxPooling2D added prior to predicting the bounding boxes. Adding this layer results in losing the spatial information on the image and hence the bounding boxes were shifted. Instead of using this layer, just flatten the all previous outputs and directly use this to predict the bounding boxes.

Tracing is expensive and the excessive number of tracings could be due to (1) creating @tf.function repeatedly in a loop, (2) passing tensors with different shapes, (3) passing Python objects instead of tensors. For (1), please define your @tf.function outside of the loop. For (2), @tf.function has experimental_relax_shapes=True option that relaxes argument shapes that can avoid unnecessary retracing. As we see from above visualizations, bounding boxes are now correct. We will now further fine tune the above network

10.1.1 Cyclic Learning Rate

We will employ cyclic learning rate for futher fine tuning. Also we will enable the training for the complete network and use a very small learning rate-range. Cyclic learning rate has been used by taking reference from following paper:

<https://arxiv.org/abs/1506.01186>

[38]: ## This code has been taken from public repository:

from tensorflow.keras.callbacks import *
from tensorflow.keras import backend as K

import numpy as np

class CyclicLR(Callback):
    """This callback implements a cyclical learning rate policy (CLR).
    The method cycles the learning rate between two boundaries with some constant frequency, as detailed in this paper (https://arxiv.org/abs/↪1506.01186).
    The amplitude of the cycle can be scaled on a per-iteration or
    per-cycle basis.
    This class has three built-in policies, as put forth in the paper.
    "triangular":
        A basic triangular cycle w/ no amplitude scaling.
    "triangular2":
        A basic triangular cycle that scales initial amplitude by half each ↪cycle.
    "exp_range":
        A cycle that scales initial amplitude by gamma(cycle iterations) at ↪each cycle iteration.
    For more detail, please see paper.

Example
```python
clr = CyclicLR(base_lr=0.001, max_lr=0.006,
 step_size=2000., mode='triangular')
model.fit(X_train, Y_train, callbacks=[clr])

Class also supports custom scaling functions:
```python
clr_fn = lambda x: 0.5*(1+np.sin(x*np.pi/2.))
clr = CyclicLR(base_lr=0.001, max_lr=0.006,
 step_size=2000., scale_fn=clr_fn,
 scale_mode='cycle')
```

Arguments
base_lr: initial learning rate which is the lower boundary in the cycle.
max_lr: upper boundary in the cycle. Functionally, it defines the cycle amplitude ( $\max_{\text{lr}} - \min_{\text{lr}}$ ).
The lr at any cycle is the sum of base_lr and some scaling of the amplitude; therefore max_lr may not actually be reached depending on scaling function.
step_size: number of training iterations per
half cycle. Authors suggest setting step_size

    2-8 x training iterations in epoch.
mode: one of {triangular, triangular2, exp_range}.
Default 'triangular'.
Values correspond to policies detailed above.
If scale_fn is not None, this argument is ignored.
gamma: constant in 'exp_range' scaling function:
    gamma(cycle iterations)
scale_fn: Custom scaling policy defined by a single argument lambda function, where 0 <= scale_fn(x) <= 1 for all x >= 0.
mode parameter is ignored
scale_mode: {'cycle', 'iterations'}.
Defines whether scale_fn is evaluated on
cycle number or cycle iterations (training iterations since start of cycle). Default is 'cycle'.

WARNING:tensorflow:5 out of the last 12 calls to <function Model.make_predict_function.<locals>.predict_function at 0x000001FD9BEEFA60> triggered tf.function retracing. Tracing is expensive and the excessive number of tracings could be due to (1) creating @tf.function repeatedly in a loop, (2) passing tensors with different shapes, (3) passing Python objects instead of tensors. For (1), please define your @tf.function outside of the loop. For (2), @tf.function has experimental_relax_shapes=True option that relaxes argument shapes that can avoid unnecessary retracing. For (3), please refer to https://www.tensorflow.org/tutorials/customization/performance#python_or_tensor_args and https://www.tensorflow.org/api_docs/python/tf/function for more details.

11 Summary

Objective: To create a Deep Learning based model for Car detection Tasks completed to achieve this: Images imported and mapped to its classes and annotations made Exploratory Data analysis and steps for preprocessing identified Preprocessing of data – normalization and resizing of images and bounding boxes done along with data augmentation to improve model performance and reduce generalization error Trained and Tested a set of CNN based models and other hybrid architectures and models evaluated based on relevant performance measures . Learning Rate Finder, Cyclic Learning Rate, progressive unfreezing, batch size , dropout techniques applied to improve performance EfficientNetB5 gave the best results in terms of classification and localization (>85%). Best Model pickled and saved User interface created using Streamlit for loading data and visualization, training and inference based on pretrained models and provide comparison across the models.

Given more time for model tuning and with better processor capabilities , could try and improve the performance of the trained model and could explore other state of the art models. Explore other tools PyTorch instead of Keras , docker containerization and other tools for user interface creation. More diligence on data and creating new set of classes if required. Detailed error analysis and identifying distinct images and retrain the model till performance is improved.

The Stream lit based User Interface Implementation of the code is available in the file AIML_Capstone_CV_CarDetection_MarsGrp2CV2_UICode.py
